In global city rankings, Berlin has been among the top ten for years. Complex cultural events, an engaging way of life, and a unique history have earned the metropolis its global renown. It motivates millions of visitors every year to come to Berlin to see for themselves. Over the past decade, about 400,000 of them were so captivated by the city that they decided to stay for good.

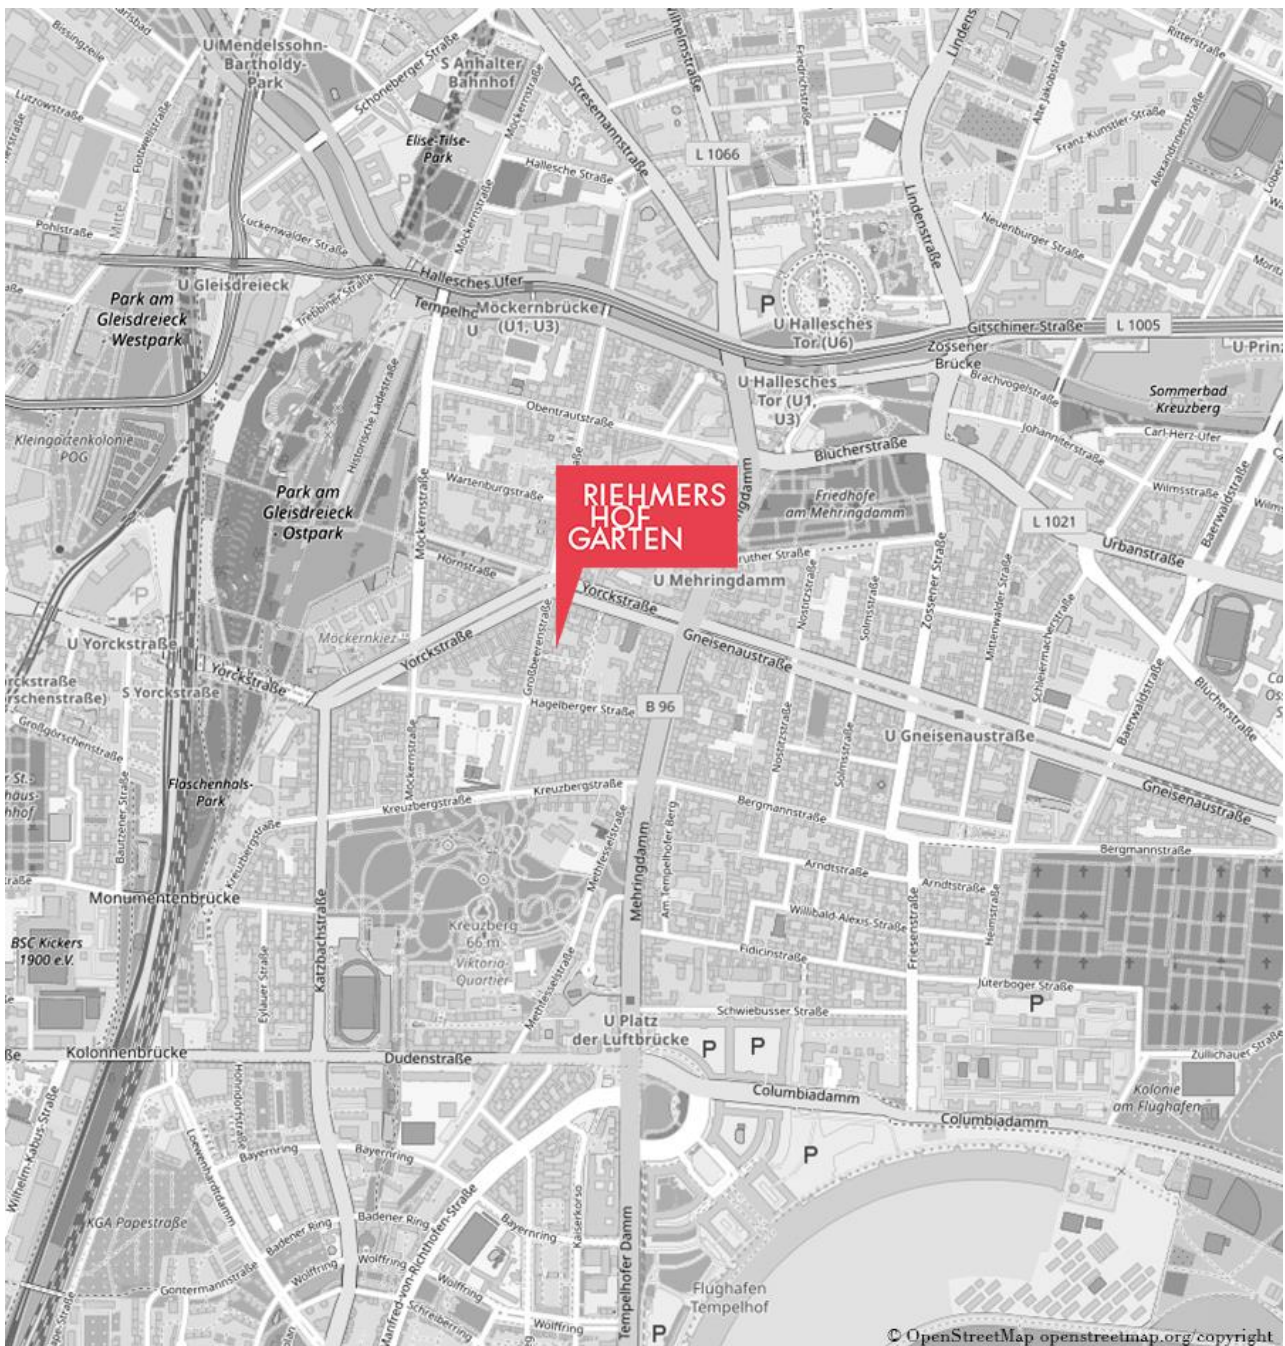

To be sure, a high level of liveability makes it easy to fall in love with Berlin. But the city has so much more to offer. As a science hub, Berlin offers skills and knowledge in just about any scientific field you can think of. Moreover, Germany's capital of start-up businesses has developed an economic dynamic that attracts companies from inside and outside the country. Its location in the European heartland recommends it as place of business every bit as much as its ability to provide high-skilled graduates and its proximity to the start-up scene with its innovative potential for prospering businesses of tomorrow.

In Kreuzberg, the impulsive energy of young generations is keenly felt and reflected in up-and-coming trends. Aside from this district's centrality and legendary hipness, life here is defined by a highly productive cultural scene and by creative diversity. Especially the Bergmannstrasse has enormous appeal. Every store here is one of a kind—whether it sells wine, pastry or coffee, antique junk, designer artefacts or vintage goods by the pound, gourmet dog food, vegan takeaway food or famous sausages—while the space in between is dotted with cinemas, theatres and churches that occasionally double as concert halls. All of this embedded in a historic setting of streets that are testimony to the cultural heritage of the city. Viktoriapark, Gleisdreieck Park or the vast grasslands of the former Tempelhof airport grounds provide plenty of outdoor space for local recreation and leisure activities.

Großbeerenstraße 56E, 10965 Berlin

It is a gem dating back to Imperial Germany, and an asset to Berlin as architectural landmark: Riehmers Hofgarten. At the time, Wilhelm Riehmer let his courage and visionary zeal as builder inspire him to bypass urban planning standards in favour of upscale liveability. Instead of a dense development of tenements grouped around tiny courtyards, he created a magnificent complex on a plot he owned in 1891/1892. With attention to detail and the diligence of a heritage curator, the splendid heritage site has now been largely restored. It positively beams with its regained historic glamour. The patrician façades shine with bright structures while the staircases are dominated by warm earthy colours. The entrance doors to houses and flats, windows and stair railings were overhauled true to their original historic design. Partially uncovered frescoes on the mezzanine levels illustrate the artful aesthetics of the era when the house was built. To meet sophisticated expectations, modern-day quality was seamlessly integrated. The lighting system as well as the bell and video intercom system complete the authentic design by adding upscale state-of-the-art technology. Water supply lines and waste water pipes were replaced, while heating and electrical installations were either upgraded or replaced.

The eleven entranceways are named after scions of the Hohenzollern dynasty. Take the lift in the entranceway "Elisabeth" at Grossbeerenstrasse 56 E up to the third floor and walk the rest to reach a certain flat on the fourth floor. Extending over 104 square metres, this flat will enchant anyone who appreciates upgraded period buildings.

Residents of this housing complex have the communal use of the lush courtyard garden whose groomed trails, picnic lawns, boule court and playground offer various options for hanging out and comparing notes. Other amenities include the roofed-over buggy and bicycle park, and access to the underground car park via the courtyard garden.

Facilities.

Großbeerenstraße 56E, 10965 Berlin

The 2-bedroom flat welcomes you with the generous proportions that Berlin's stately front buildings are famous for. Refurbished in line with the specifications of the heritage conservation authority, it extends over 104 square metres.

The flat's hallway leads to an eat-in kitchen of 29 square metres whose windows overlook the quiet backyard. Two successive rooms off to one side measure 26 square metres each. Both rooms face south and are sunny, the rear one having the extra benefit of a balcony. The new bathroom is accessed from the first bedroom, the guest WC from the hallway. There is also a dressing room and closet here.

In line with heritage guidance, walls and floors were treated with great care, while plaster and ceiling ornaments were painstakingly restored, completed or recreated in their original style. The same goes for the historic parquetry and board floors. Where needed, the herringbone parquet flooring was replaced with new oak elements copying the original. The windows were overhauled as well. The elegant bathroom integrates bathtub and shower into a classy setting of matte black tiles on floors and walls. The guest WC is defined by the mellow sand colour of its hexagonal tiles. Only the decorative natural stone tiles above the wash basin disrupt the symmetry.

Luxurious fittings and clever ceramic fixtures such as a WC with shower feature, dimmable downlights, wooden vanity substructures with illuminated drawers, and dimmable heated wall mirrors complement the design with purposeful finesse. From radiator to towel rack, each fit-out detail blends smoothly with the overall aesthetics. To ensure optimal media connectivity, all internet, phone and TV cables were replaced. A bolt crossbar lock secures the flat entrance door. The unit includes a basement store room and a parking spot.
